Namaste,

I felt moved and loved by your gifts and for remembering us. I definitely appreciate that you see and treat us like human beings. When I internalize these positive intentions, it makes me feel better overall. It allows me to feel good about others. It's that positive cycle that only completes itself when it's received, then directed outward again. And so it keeps on building. So thank you for seeing us.

Lately, I've noticed that when I see examples (especially on TV) of people reaching out to help and support each other, I feel joy. As a matter of fact, we often do kind things for each other right here at San Quentin. During this crisis, it's heartening to watch humanity coming together and embrace the spirit of connection, inclusivity, and compassion that seems to take hold of at least some. On the other hand, the sad reality that opportunists and power-hungry sects will use this crisis to exploit and grab more power...
I enjoyed the articles — information is invaluable. It saddened me that Indian political leaders have sunk so low. What happened to the principles that Gandhi and so many great teachers have espoused? "Harmoniously is the primary tenet of yoga.

Who knew that ordinary hand soaps would be placed on such a high pedestal in the 21st century? I volunteered to be on the medico-strike team for North Block. Mainly that's because I'm inspired and want to do something to help. Fortunately, for all of us, we haven't had a case of corona.

At first, the lockdown was eerie and uncomfortable. I was lonely. It's true — I kind of lose a little part of my identity when I'm not active. So I started writing and playing more songs. Five days a week.

Even though I had no intention of writing about the experience, of course, I did. The pieces are all about my perception of what is going on right now. I'm also taking advantage of ample quiet time with more meditation and more chanting. Not just for myself but for the world.
We are all grateful for any discussions you are having with these on our behalf. If you had any input in helping us get there, that's immensely helpful. The loneliness went away when I was able to go outside, exercise, and communicate with other men about what we were experiencing.

Thank you for being such a strong advocate for us. Your words were helpful and inspiring. We're not forgotten, and that feels good. Oh, I ate the trail mix in one fell swoop. Everything you gave us is always quality.

You're people treating others rehabilitated and their healing when you treat us with respect, compassion, and kindness. I can feel that and it makes me want to model it and pay it forward to society. I appreciate our warden for allowing this.

Sincerely,

June Deacon
